

Hindi", "Marathi" and "Sanskrit" online classes

Written by Administrator

Tuesday, 12 August 2008 00:17 - Last Updated Monday, 22 February 2010 00:29

SCOMST launches "Hindi", "Marathi" and "Sanskrit" online one-to-one classes for international students. Hindi/Marathi families residing any where in the world can take these classes online via internet and learn how to read/write devnagari script. After some research, SCOMST management found out that families outside the country teach their kids about how to talk in Hindi. or Marathi but they don't spend time in teaching how to read/write devnagari script as it is not necessary for their curriculam. SCOMST believes that by teaching our kids about how to read/write devnagari script will help them know their own roots of the culture and also increase communication between local Indian communities. SCOMST will also provide Sanskrit classes to all international students which is one of the most ancient Indian language.